BACKGROUND

A. Education

University of Maryland, Ph.D., Education Policy and Leadership (Higher Education Emphasis), 2004

Allegheny College, B.A., Psychology, 1993

B. Experience

Academic

Fellow, The Brookings Institution, Metropolitan Policy Program (2019-Current)

David M. Rubenstein Fellow, The Brookings Institution, Metropolitan Policy Program (2017-2019)

Associate Professor, University of New Orleans, Department of Educational Leadership, Counseling and Foundations – Higher Education (2010-2011)

Assistant Professor, University of New Orleans, Department of Educational Leadership, Counseling and Foundations – Higher Education (2004-2010)

Professional

Columnist, Hechinger Report – Teachers College; The Root.com (2013-Current)

The Hechinger Report is a nonprofit news organization focused on producing in-depth education journalism. The weekly column Degree of Interest provides detailed analysis and opinion on educational issues. From 2016-2017, in partnership with the Root.com, one column a month, which was focused on Black men and boys, simultaneously appeared on both sites.

Consultant, The Data Center (2015-2017)

I provided data analysis, writing support, and thought leadership on issues surrounding youth and poverty.

Educational and Academic Leader, New Orleans Center for the Creative Arts (Interim Chief Academic Officer January-June 2016)

The Educational and Academic Leader was the primary lead on oversight, partnership, leadership and elevation of what happens inside the classrooms at NOCCA. There are 13 different primary areas of instruction at NOCCA, 11 in the Arts and two in the non-arts Academic Studio.

Founding Dean, College of Urban Education Davenport University (2013-2015)

The Founding Dean was charged with establishing a groundbreaking new College of Urban Education focusing on the development and preparation of teachers and administrators with specialized skills designed to enable them to teach and lead effectively in urban school districts. As the chief architect and advocate for the College, I created new relationships within the University and collaborations with external constituencies in order to build a program that will be a pioneer in urban education.

Contributor, Washington Post – PostEverything (2014-2016)

PostEverything is an online Washington Post magazine. I provided policy analyses on national issues on education, race, and racial politics.

Associate Director, Loyola Institute for Quality and Equity in Education, College of Social Sciences (2011-2013)

The Institute assessed the success of post-Katrina education reforms and also created enrichment opportunities for students in the metro area. Through action research projects, the associate director engaged a large number of dedicated advocates, stakeholders and policymakers to ensure that all students have access to an excellent education. By using this collaborative process to produce empirical, objective research, I produced articles, reports and programs that helped New Orleans's unique system of education.

Team Lead, Orleans PLACE MATTERS (2011-2013)

The mission of the Orleans Parish PLACE MATTERS Team was to advocate for policies that promote safe, healthy learning environments for youth and families. In 2012 Orleans PLACE MATTERS and the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies released the report PLACE MATTERS for Health in Orleans Parish: Ensuring Opportunities for Good Health for All, which outlines policy recommendations that serve as directives for our mission.

Associate Dean, College of Education and Human Development; CEO, Capital One-UNO Charter Network (2008-2011)

The primary responsibility of this position was to implement the PK-16 educational process for the Capital One-UNO charter school network. The Associate Dean assumed the responsibility of working with the New Beginnings Schools Foundation Board of Directors in developing and implementing their strategic plan. I assisted faculty in developing institutes and coursework to serve the New Orleans charter school community, and supervised and evaluated the Executive Director of Charter Schools and school leaders. This position was also responsible for developing partnerships with pertinent community businesses and non-profit organizations, universities, schools, neighborhood associations, and churches to help Network schools meet educational objectives. Other responsibilities included overseeing the research and assessment program for Network schools; identifying and garnering state, federal and private resources to meet the education and administrative needs of the Network; developing and administering a public relations strategy and representing the Network as chief media spokesperson; and advocating for policies that positively impact educational, familial, and community outcomes.

Coordinator, Student Leadership Institute for the Pennsylvania Migrant Education Program (Summers 1990-2006)
